Title: NWHSU Collection on Chiropractic History

Dates: 1950s-2010s

Extent: 1 large document case

Name of Collector(s): Unknown; bulk of collection likely collated by Corinne Florin (former library technician)

Administrative History: Chiropractic is usually said to have been discovered in 1895. These materials were collected by Northwestern College of Chiropractic and Northwestern Health Sciences University to document some of the history of chiropractic. Some of these materials were collected by the library and are stamped with an accession date; for others, the collector and context of collection are unknown.

Scope and Content: This collection contains documents, ephemera, and realia related to the history of chiropractic, including many materials from the Centennial in 1995. This collection is not a complete history of chiropractic, but likely includes materials collected by various departments or faculty or staff members, and materials donated to the university by outside contributors. Some materials are originals, mostly original publications or grey literature, but many are copies of publications or newspaper articles.

Conditions Governing Access: None

Physical Access: Materials are housed in archival storage and may require advance notice for access. Older materials have sustained some damage and should be used with caution.

Conditions Governing Reproduction and Use: Copyright to these materials remains with the University. The reproduction, broadcast, display, public presentation, and other uses in any means or format of materials protected by copyright, beyond that which is allowed by fair use, requires written permission of the University. The user is responsible for ensuring permissions have been attained as necessary.
