

Professional Licensure Disclosures

Professional licensure is an important milestone on your way to becoming a healthcare professional. Northwestern Health Sciences University offers several programs that lead to professional licensure outside the state of Minnesota. Each state has different professional licensures and certification requirements, including professional examinations, background checks, years of experience, fingerprinting requirements, etc. Students are encouraged to check their state’s information and contact the appropriate licensing agency to seek information and additional guidance before beginning an academic program. The information presented below is current as of August 1, 2024.

While we are confident that successfully meeting program requirements will prepare you for career success, completion of an NWHSU program does not guarantee licensure or certification to practice, nor does the university or any of its agents guarantee employment, licensure, or certification to practice upon completion of a program.

Most states require the National Certification Commission for Acupuncture and Oriental Medicine (NCCAOM) examination and/or certification for licensing. Licensure requirements vary by state, and not all states license the practice of acupuncture or Chinese medicine. Program completion does not guarantee licensure. In Minnesota, consult the Minnesota Board of Medical Practice . For other states, consult the National Certification Commission for Acupuncture and Oriental Medicine .

College of Chiropractic

If you plan to practice in the United States, you are required to pass examinations administered by the National Board of Chiropractic Examiners \(NBCE\). *Each state has unique licensure requirements that are subject to change and may go beyond the institution's graduation requirements. Some states require completion of a bachelor's degree (BS). It is the responsibility of the student to research their prospective state requirements. Please consult the American Chiropractic Association's State Licensing Boards for state-based information. NWHHSU's College of Chiropractic is an accredited program recognized in all 50 states.
